Preface and Acknowledgments

These are intermediate level materials. Their purpose is to improve a student's listening comprehension of formal Malay and Indonesian speech as well as introduce students to formal writing in a guided and structured way.

The materials are divided into two sections. Section 1, Sejarah Malaysia, comprises 12 selections relating to the early colonial history of Malaysia, Singapore and Brunei, and Section 2, Sejarah Indonesia, selections relating to the early colonial history of Indonesia. Included in each selection are the new vocabulary items which the student may not know listed in the order in which they occur in the recording. At the end of each section is a glossary comprising an alphabetical listing of all of the new vocabulary items in the 12 selections. Following the glossary is the text of the recorded selections.

Each section is a self-contained unit with a full Introduction. The Introduction contains both general advice on how to approach the exercises, as well as specific information on how to answer the questions.

There are a number of ways to approach the use of these materials. Where the focus of interest is exclusively on Malaysia or Indonesia, then all selections may be chosen from either Section 1, Sejarah Malaysia or Section 2 Sejarah Indonesia. Where there is a mixed focus of interest, then selections may be chosen from both Section 1 and 2. The differences in Malaysian and Indonesian usage represented in the selections here is minimal and should cause students minimal difficulty if asked to listen to both. The number of selections chosen will depend on how this unit is integrated into the course as a whole.

If selections are assigned in an order different to that in which they are presented, there is one thing to bear in mind. New vocabulary is introduced only once. For example, if merebut [to seize] is a new vocabulary item for Selection 1, it will appear as such in that selection only. If it also occurs in Selection 2, then it will not appear in the sequential list of new vocabulary items, but will appear in the alphabetical list of vocabulary items at the end of the section.
